The firm will also partner with a civil litigation team and a corporate/IT team at a later stage.

“We intend to create a highly client focused environment to provide a truly excellent service” said Callol.

Callol is a prominent antitrust lawyer with experience heading the competition practice of a Magic Circle firm. He has previously led roles in investigations and court appeals in film, water pump, recycling, food, asphalt, hair care products and car distribution cartels with some cases leading up to the Supreme Court.

He has also advised in abuse of dominance and state aid cases and has substantial experience in antitrust damages litigation. Callol is also well known for leading one of the first leniency related proceedings in Spain.

He says of the Callol Law team: “We will continue to do very much what we have done until now i.e. combine our specialist competition and regulatory skills with the business acumen and know-how we have acquired over the years assisting our clients in their commercial and contentious requirements.”

Callol is listed in the telecoms and competition editions of Who's Who Legal.
